

Isabella Cox

Bella is a 10 year member of the Vienna Fighting Farmers 4-H club. She is the daughter of Jason & Kimberly Cox.

The major projects that she has taken in 4-H include cake decorating and photography, but mostly showing dairy goats.

Bella's future schooling/job plans include attending the University of Evansville to major in Elementary Education. She would like to come back to Scott County and teach 2nd grade at Lexington Elementary, where she went to school.

The greatest contribution 4-H has made in Bella's life is that she has learned several skills. She has learned perseverance and patience when dealing with animals as well as confidence while showing. She has learned friendship and how to give back to the community that pours into you.

Bella describes the most important thing she learned from her participation in the 4-H program "During 4-H, I have learned that it takes a community to do most everything, and we are so blessed to have that community. I can't tell you the number of helping hands I've received over the years from people I don't even know the names of. Everyone has been so kind and willing to jump in and help whenever needed. And I appreciate every single one."
